President Hoover In Address to Joint Session of Congress

200th Anniversary of Geo. Washington's Birth Is Eulogized

FATHER OF NATION

Bi-Centennial to Be Celebrated During the Next Nine Months

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Standing before the congress of the United States, President Hoover marked today the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth, by pronouncing him the chief contributor to the Nation's greatness.

"The true eulogy of Washington," he said, "is this mighty nation."

The chiefs executive's words—delivered before a joint session of the senate and house—initiated formally the bi-centennial celebration of the first President's birth, which will extend over the next nine months.

The occasion marked Mr. Hoover's first appearance before a joint session.

Quotes History

Turning completely from present-day problems, the president traced the course of the country's growth over the past two centuries and called for a renewal of the inspiration of Washington.

"Proudly," he said, "we report to our forefathers that the republic is more secure, more constant, more powerful, more truly great than at any other time in its history."

He declared impatience with those who undertake what he called "the irrational humanizing" of Washington. There is no need, the president said, to look beneath "his unique qualities of greatness" and great accomplishments.

"We need not attempt at canonization of George Washington," he said. "We know he was human, subject to the discouragements and perplexities that come to us all. We know that he had moments of deepest anxiety. We know of his sufferings, and the sacrifices and anguish that came to him. We know of his resentment of injustice and misrepresentation. And yet we know that he never lost faith in our people."

Founder of Liberty

Throughout his address the president paid Washington tribute as a founder of liberty, of a unique government and of a system of national life.

Defining this system as it appears today, he asserted it "embraces a system of relationships to other nations based upon no thought of imperialism, no desire to dominate; a determined national self-reliance in defense and independence in action; freedom from all commitment to the unknown future, and an aspiration to promote peace and good will among men."

"From Washington's spirit," he said, "there has grown an infusion of social ideals with the quality of magnanimity: upholding prosperity with generosity, dignity with forbearance, security without privilege, which has raised our institutions to a level of humanity and nobility nowhere else attained."

Flood Threatens Near Yazoo City

Five Miles of Highway Covered and Rains Continue Falling

YAZOO CITY, Miss.—(AP)—From six to 24 inches of water covered the five-mile stretch of brick road running north and parallel with the Yazoo river and forming a part of the state highway. Rain aggregating 2.81 inches fell in Yazoo City during the past 24 hours and heavy clouds foreshadowed continued rains though the night, Saturday.

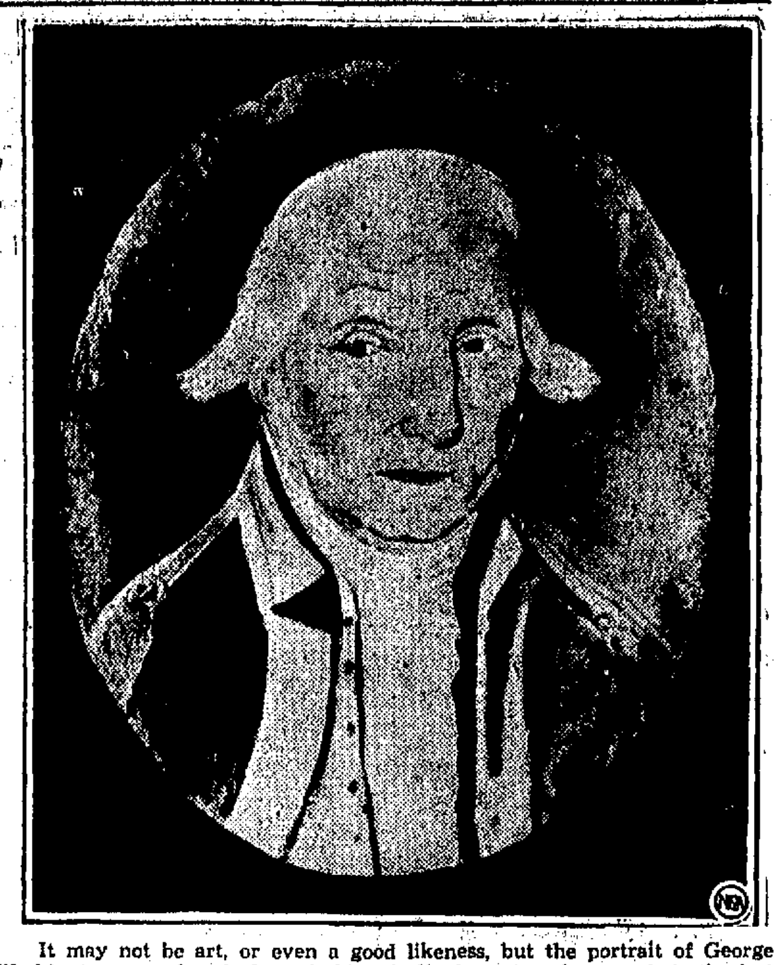
The water that poured over the highway following the continual rains during the past week, climaxed by that of Saturday night, washed great gaps bag levee that had been thrown up to protect the highway, causing considerable damage to this important trunk line.

A state highway official said it would be impossible to protect this stretch until the water had eceded. Special deputies were placed on guard to restict traffic over the highway to through traffic.

A rise of four-tenths foot was registered on the river guage this morning, making the reading 32 feet, or seven feet over flood stage. This was followed by a fall of one-tenth during the day.

W. N. Sticklin, veteran of many floods and keeper of the bridge, said thtat additional rains would cause a furthe rise. Most of the residents of that section across the river known as Jonestown were leaving their homes Sunday.

George Washington's Last Portrait Just Discovered



It may not be art, or even a good likeness, but the portrait of George Washington reproduced above is historically important because it is the last one known to have been made of him from life. Its date is 1799, the year of Washington's death, and it was executed in crayon color by Dr. Elisha C. Dick, a physician who attended Washington during his last illness and who marked a clock at Mt. Vernon to show the exact moment of the First President's death. The portrait, executed on the back of a parchment certificate of membership in a Masonic lodge to which both Washington and Dr. Dick belonged, recently was discovered in Alexandria, Va.

Dirigible Akron Damaged by Wind

Huge Ship Breaks Loose From Mooring Post Early Monday

LAKEHURST, N. J.—A rudder of the navy dirigible Akron was broken off Monday morning as the giant craft broke loose from the rear handling gear and scraped the ground in a full quarter turn in the light north wind.

The dirigible was being prepared for a flight with a Congressional Inspection Committee when the accident occurred.

The inspection trip was indefinitely postponed.

Reports said that the fabric of the Akron's stern was torn, leaving a wide gap in the ships side.

Mrs. M. R. Gibson Is Buried Sunday

Aged Pioneer Resident of County Dies at Fort Worth, Texas

Funeral services an burial for Mrs. Mattie R. Gibson, who died at Fort Worth, Texas, Friday night, were held Sunday afternoon, Rev. O. J. Wade of Texarkana, in charge of the services.

Mrs. Gibson was the mother of John S. Gibson, local druggist and two other sons, Finley of Louisville, Ky., and Arthur of Little Rock. One daughter, Mrs. G. E. Cameron of Fort Worth, Tex.

She was among the pioneers of Hempstead county, having lived for many years three miles south of Hope on the Spring Hill road.

R. N. (Bob) Berry Drops Dead Here

Veteran Member of Streets Department Succumbs at Noon Monday

R. N. (Bob) Berry, 68, veteran employe of Hope's department of city streets, dropped dead at his home on South Bonner street at noon Monday.

He was believed the victim of a heart attack or a stroke of apoplexy. Although complaining of indigestion, he had worked part of the day, but returned home to lie down.

His daughter, Mrs. Lee Ellis, arranged the divan for him, but returning to the room a moment later found he had toppled to the floor dead.

Mr. Berry is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. Ellis, of this city, and Mrs. B. O. Burt, of Harrisburg, Pa.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending word from the daughter in Harrisburg as to when she will arrive home.

Mr. Berry lived most of his life in Waldo, Columbia county, and Hope. He came to Hope many years ago and was originally in the transfer business, before joining the city government service.

Levee Gives Way Near Garland City

Further Strengthening to Hold Back Red River Waters Sought

TEXARKANA.—A 60 or 70-foot segment of the levee holding the rising waters of Red river, 10 miles south of Garland City, gave way and slipped into the river Sunday, according to reports received from the flooded sections by R. V. Hall, engineer.

The break in the levee had been expected several days by government engineers and surveyors sent from Monroe, La., to aid in plans to save it. The segment cast into the river represents about half of a weak part of the levee, the whole of which was expected to be broken by early in the week.

Reports received by the district engineer said the river had not plunged into the lowlands but many acres would be flooded in the event the entire weak segment gives way.

Although government experts are studying the situation with the idea of building a half mile loop behind the weakened sections of the river, little can be done at present on account of the water-soaked condition of the land which makes construction virtually impossible.

Hall said he would leave early Monday for the flooded sections to plan further strengthening of the levees.

Roads in that section were reported to be impassable.

Municipal Judge Hears Many Cases

Monday's Docket Occupies Judge Gentry Entire Morning

Municipal Judge U. A. Gentry heard a lengthy police docket unfold in a busy session of Hope Municipal Court at the city hall Monday morning.

A. W. Cobb was fined $100 and costs for alleged possession of liquor for sale, on a city charge; and was bound over in $500 bond to the April grand jury on a state charge accusing him of making a sale. The city fine was appealed to circuit court.

O. D. Middlebrooks and R. H. Tunstall, well known south county farmers, were fined $5 each on a simple assault charge arising out of a fist fight Saturday on a downtown street in Hope.

Homan Powell, Robert Patterson and John Trotter were fined $10 and costs each for drunkenness.

Garland Neal, arraigned on a charge of disturbing the peace, was fined $5.

Leonard Brown was tried for petit larceny, but was acquitted.

Pearce Escapes With Life Term

Charles Pearce Faces Trial on Murder Charge February 29

LITTLE ROCK.—Don Pearce, Pine Bluff locomotive enginere, Saturday was convicted by a jury in First Division Circuit Court of first degree murder. Punishment was fixed at life imprisonment in the state penitentiary. The verdict was returned after the jury deliberated about an hour and 15 minutes.

Don Pearce smiled as the jury returned the verdict and Charles L. Pearce, former linotype operator of the Gazette, indicted jointly with Don for killing of James E. Chapple, cashier of the Gazette, appeared well pleased with the verdict.

"You did all you could," Don Pearce told his attorneys, Maurice Reinberger and Walter A. Isgrig. "I am well satisfied." He embraced the attorneys.

Don Pearce and his brother were indicted on January 12 in connection with the shooting of Mr. Chapple who was wounded fatally on the morning of January 9, while trying to save the Gazette pay roll from an armed robber.

Don Pearce contended that after he reached Little Rock on the night of January 8, he had been riding around with his brother, Charles, and that he did not know what had happened until the following day, when he awoke at the Missouri Pacific railroad station.

Charles Pearce faces trial on February 29, in connection with the murder. He sat through all the trial, except when state attorneys had objected to the presence of Charles and his wife in the courtroom.

Murray Declares Himself Candidate

Hands Out Statements Announcing He Wants to Be Nominee

OKLAHOMA CITY.—(AP)—Governor William H. Murray Sunday announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president. He made the announcement in a brief statement at the governor's mansion, where newspapermen were called to meet him at noon.

Wearing a black slouch hat pulled well over his eyes, the governor handed out the statements and remarked:

"Let's have some Paraguay tea. It's good for auto intoxication."

He led newspaper men to a small room in the mansion where they were served tea while the governor related stories of South America, where he unsuccessfully attempted to establish an American colony several years ago.

Characteristically, the fiery executive, who returned from South America penniless in 1929 and hitch-hiked his way through his campaign, declared he will make no trades, form no combination, nor compromise on any principle for delegates or for the nomination."

"If successful, my hands will be free of baneful influences," he said. 'I feel reasonably certai nof the election if nominated, but if not nominated, I shall have escaped a herculean task and an awful responsibility and thereby won a longer life than by assumption of the burdens of their great and responsible office."

"Now that you are a candiate, I suppose you will speak in line with your platform at four speeches you will make in Indiana next week," a correspondent suggested.

"I'll say what I please," Murray replied. "If they don't like it, all right, I'll have a bushel of fun."

Leaving here Monday afternoon Murray will speak at Indianapolis, Monticello, Marion and Gary, then return to Indianapolis for a state Democratic convention.

Thousands of letters have come to him from all parts of the nation urging him to run because he was favorably advertised "among the grass roots" voters "to such an extent that it would require $5,000,000 for any other man nominated by the party to be made so favorably known among the rank and file of voters who elect tickets," the announcement said.

'I am not over-excited about victory in the convention, for the reason that if the people do not shake tremselves into activity sufficently to attend the party caucus, or precinct convention, when called, selfish politicians and flunkeys of the great interest will control them and in turn, will elect delegates to the county convention and from it, to the state and national conventions. The element that controls the precinct caucus will control the national convention."

"I take this step," the statement concluded, "only out of consideration of a profound sense of duty to the great middle class and the little man, for on one else seems to care to champion their cause."

11 Candidates For Alderman in City Election Tuesday

Last-Minute Canvass for Votes Under Way Here Monday

FOUR IN WARD ONE

Two-Man Races for Attorney, and in Wards Two and Three

Polling Places

Polling places for the city election Tuesday have been announced as follows by the Democratic city central committee:

Ward One—One door south of Hotel Barlow on Elm street.
Ward Two—Frisco station.
Ward Three—Service Station 556.
Ward Four—Citl hall.

Candidates entered in the city election which is to be held Tuesday began a last-minute scramble for votes early Monday morning—and the campaign came to life after weeks of little excitement.

This is an "off-year" election in the city, with the mayor, municipal judge, and half the aldermen, holding over fom last year.

11 for Alderman

There are 11 candidates for alderman, with one from each of the four wards to be chosen. A two-man race appears in the contest for city attorney, with W. S. Atkins, incumbent, opposed by Pat Casey. The city clerk, Fred Webb, seeking re-election, is unopposed.

Absentee ballots for citizens who will be out of the city Tuesday must be obtained from County Clerk Arthur Anderson at the courthouse in Washington, either in person or by letter. The rules formerly permitted the voter to obtain absentee ballots from the city clerk, but beginning a year ago such ballots were placed under authority of the county clerk.

Hot Ward Campaigns

The hottest campaigns are being waged in the aldermanic races, with four men seeking the council post from Ward One. Dr. Don Smith, veteran member of the council, refused to run for re-election. His place is being sought by the following: Roy Anderson, insurance man; Lex Helms, salesman; E. G. Coop, transfer operator; and Bennie Benton, department store bookkeeper.

In Ward Two, Roy Stephenson, incumbent seeking re-election is opposed by L. A. Keith, jeweler.

Ward Three also presents a two-man race, with Theo P. Will, incumbent, opposed by S. F. Huntley, former veteran justice of the peace.

There are three candidates in Ward Four: Ira Halliburton, seeking re-election; Clyde Monts, produce and seed store proprietor; and A. M. McKamey, railroad man.

Body of Professor Is Buried in Snow

Skiis Entangled in Trees as He Tries to Escape Snow Slide

LONGMIRE, Wash. — (AP) — Rescue parties digging into tons of snow left by an avalanche early Sunday found the body of Richard Pearce, young University of Washington professor who was caught while hiking with friends in Ranier national park.

With his skiis entangled in a small tree, he apparently had been running away from the approaching slide.

The slide, cutting a path 50 feet wide swept down upon the group of five, a mile and a half from Paradise Inn. Charles McDonald, a university senior of Seattle, was also caught in the swirling snow, but struggled free after being knocked down.

The hikers, led by Pierce, were skiing into Paradise valley, at 25-foot intervals behind him were McDonald and three other students, Leroy Limes of Council Bluff, Ia., Palmer Koons of Spokane, and Earl Montgomery of Seattle.

Under Masama Ridge the slide broke loose several hundred yards above them and thundered downward, Pearce was unable to outrun it and was entangled in his skiis and the tree.

McDonald, fighting his way free, rushed on to Paradise Inn to notify park officials while the others dug for their companion.

Under the leadership of Chief Ranger John Davis, the searchers worked into the night with flares and torches to find the body.

Pearce, who was 28 years old, graduated from the school of architecture at the university with a brilliant record in 1926. He became an instructor and later was advanced to full professorship.

Export of Cotton Again Increases

American Supply Is Whittled Down by Growing Shipments

MEMPHIS.—(U. S. Department Agriculture)—The cotton market during the period February 13th to 19th witnessed more activity than for several weeks past with quotations February 19th about 35 points higher than those February 11th (Feb. 12 most markets closed.

Demand was stated as considerably improved with almost all grades and lengths of staple inquired for. The volume of actual transactions was comparatively large with business mostly confined to prompt shipments. Holders of raw cotton were said to continue persistent in withholding their stocks fro mmarket at present price levels. Average price middling 7-8 inch compiled from the quotations of the ten designated markets February 19th was 6.64c compared with 6.23c February 11th and 10.20c February a year ago.

Reported sales by the ten markets for the past week amounted to 148,299 bales compared with 106,132 the previous week and 85,621 fro the like week a year ago.

According to the Bureau of the Census there were consumed in the United States during the six months ending January 31st, 2,631,272 bales, compared with 2,460,250 the corresponding period in 1931.

The decrease in the apparent supply of American cotton remaining in the U. S. from January 1st to February 1st this season amounted to about 1,300,000 bales, compared with a decrease of 969,000 bales during same period last season, and on February 1st this year the apparent supply in the U. S. amounted to 15,700,000 bales against 11,700,000 a year earlier.

Exports continue to gain over the figures of the previous year, and to February 19th amounted to about 5,500,000 bales against 4,800,000 a year ago. According to the N. Y. Cotton Exchange, world consumption of American cotton from August 1st to January 31st this season amounted to about 6,000,000 bales, compared with 5,400,000 a year ago for the like period.

Town of Hongkew, Japanese Base Is Scene of Fighting

Many Chinese Civilians Who Refused to Move Are Feared Dead

FIRES ARE REPORTED

Activities In Woosung Area Said to Be Quiet Late Monday

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Chinese artillery, trained on Hongkew, Japanese base, cut loose Monday [illegible] with the heaviest bombardment in several days, blasting the North [illegible] road.

Some shells fell in Chinese residential areas where many householders had refused to evacuate.

It was feared that many Chinese civilians were killed and the shelling was so heavy that ambulances could not get to the wounded.

A dozen fires broke out in the neighborhood of the Japanese barracks and the flames spread while the firemen stood helpless.

The bombardment began soon after the Chinese infantry had been driven back in an attempt to advance through the Japanese positions into Hongkew.

Late Monday night the fight was still going on with neither side gaining any great advantage.

There was not any major activities reported in the Woosung area.

Glass in Defense of Credit Measure

Says Hoover Would Extend Small-Bank Aid to Big Institutions

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A [illegible] tussle over the legislation to expand Federal Reserve credit loomed Sunday after Senator Glass charged that the administration had attempted to create an impression that all banks could not benefit under its provisions.

The virginia Democrat said the administraton was back of a move to have Senate and House conferees extend to bg banks the provision in the Glass-Steagall bill expressly providing for small banks, although the first section of the measure permits large institutions to have full advantage of the new credit facilities.

Glass said that under the first provision of the bill, a group of five banks, regardless of capitalization, can receive benefits of the credit expansion. This, he explained, was intended for large banks in commercial and industrial centers.

Under the second provision, individual banks with capitalization not exceeding $2,000,000, can receive credit benefits, Glass noted.

"The second provision is avowedly for small banks so detached from commercial centers that they would be at a disadvantage in receiving accommodations by not being able to form a group as provided under the first provision," he said.

"The administration is trying to get for the big banks the provision avowedly intended at the White House conference for the small banks.

Sunday the administration was reported behind the Senate wording. It became apparent that President Hoover and his advisors were anxious that this limitation be removed on the ground that only banks with capitalization below $2,000,000 would be helped, Glass said.

Glass plans to call Senate and House conferees to compose the differences between their bills Tuesday, with a view to submitting a report to Congress for final action before the end of the week.

James S. Steel to Quit Law Practice

Jurist Will Remove to Lockesburg to Make Future Home

DE QUEEN—Judge James S. Steel of DeQueen at the conclusion of the February term of Circuit Court, announced his retirement from law practice and is removing to Lockesburg with his sister, Mrs. E. E. White. Judge Steel was born in Sevier county in 1850, and began law practice here in 1875. The Sino-Japanese Situation

TRYING to understand the ins and outs of the military situation around Shanghai is a bit difficult for Americans whose nearest approach to China has been a dish of chop-suey in some Chinese-American restaurant.

It's a lot easier to get things straight if we transpose the whole thing to the United States.

Imagine that Shanghai is New York City, and that some European power—England, say, just for the sake of the illustration—occupies the position of Japan, while America plays the part of China.

All along the wharves of New York's waterfront lie hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of British goods which New York merchants won't accept and New York customers wouldn't buy if they did. Angered at this boycott, the British have sent a powerful fleet which lies in New York harbor ready to act.

All of New England, meanwhile, has been seized by a British army, and mayors and governors have been put into office who will support the British power.

Manhattan Island is a foreign concession, ruled jointly by French, English, Italian and Russian consuls, each backed by a capable military force. The English cannot well operate there, but they can seize Brooklyn and Jersey City and thus get control of the New York area. So they shell these two points and land marines and sailors to "mop up" in Brooklyn. Unexpectedly, strong New York national guard detachments, aided by troops from Washington, stand them off.

While all of this happens, a flotilla of British destroyers steams up the Hudson and shells Albany; and England proposes that European power unite to seize Providence, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk and Charleston and demilitarize them.

To make the picture complete, imagine that most of the state governors and many of the mayors of the larger cities are practically independent, each maintaining his own army and running things with little control from Washington.

Get that picture in your wind, and you have a fair idea of what is happening in China.

Hindenburg's New Fight

PAUL VON HINDENBURG, running for re-election as president of Germany at an age when most men have long been in retirement, is undoubtedly the sentimental favorite in the race—on this side of the Atlantic, at any rate.

But in order to understand the kind of race the grand old warrior has entered, it is necessary to realize that this German election is utterly unlike the ordinary American presidential election. Dark clouds hang over all horizons, and the thunder rumbles ominously. The road ahead has three forks, and two of the three lead to revolution and turmoil unspeakable.

The Communists—fourth strongest party in the last election and strongest of all in Berlin—hope to lead the nation down their road. The Nazis—German name for the Fascisti—headed by the flighty Hitler, have another rood in mind. Von Hindenburg is all for the third one.

Until recently, the Reds and the Nazis had things very much their own way. The Nazis have cloaked, beneath a platform of irresponsible nationalism, the aims of a reactionary big-business clique, which hopes to use the party to crush the labor unions and the Social Democratic party and to give Germany a dictatorship of wealth.

Caught between two extreme forces, the ordinary citizen has at last begun to organize into group known as "The Iron Front." This group draws its recruits from the leading republican organization, the Reichbanner, from the Labor unions and the Catholic Center party; and like its opponents it has organized into a semi-military outfit which already owns a fleet of autos, motorcycles and airplanes and which is prepared to match blow for blow with either Reds or Nazis if it comes to fighting.

The peculiar character of the approaching German election thus becomes apparent. A victory for either Reds or Nazis would probably mean civil war—which, in its turn, might mean any kind of catastrophe you eare to imagine for the rest of Europe. Only if this "Iron Front" group, behind Von Hindenburg, triumphs can the rest of the world breathe freely.

It is probably the old soldier's last fight. But it is one in which the rest of the world will wish him well.

Busses and Railroads

THE way in which the auto can cut into railroad passenger traffic was never so strikingly illustrated as in a petition which the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad recently filed with Ohio authorities asking permittion to discontinue all its intrastate passenger service in Ohio.

Passenger service, said the petition has dropped far below the level at which trains can operate profitably. In 1920, the Wheeling and Lake Erie carried 1,209,213 passengers in Ohio. In 1930 it carried only 70,563.

Most railroads, of course, have not suffered that severely. But the illustration shows what can happen in a thickly populated state where there is a network of good public highways.

GEORGE WASHINGTON
Feb. 22, 1732, Dec. 14, 1799

Amid the early troublous days he towers,
The man of character and worth sublime,
Perchance the most illustrious of time,
The marvel whom we proudly claim as ours,
Like an abutment stands he, huge and square,
From which the span of liberty should spring,
The great Republic's lofty arches swing,
The destiny of countless hosts to bear.
O, Washington, across the shining years
Made glorious by thy regal manhood's might,
We humbly hail the father of our land.
First in the great succession of our peers,
Our sovereign of thine own unquestioned right,
Primal American, serene and grand.
J. G. D.

MALCO'S SAENGER

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

BY [illegible] CLEUGH

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful ELLEN ROSSITER, a salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, works at night as a dance hall hostess at Dreamland. She lives with her extravagant mother, MOLLY ROSSITER, her older sister, MYRA, and her young brother, MIKE.

STEVEN BARCLAY, 37 and Ellen's employer, loves the girl but Ellen is in love with LARRY HARROWGATE, an artist, she has met at Dreamland. She loses her heart to him in spite of the fact that he is engaged to ELIZABETH BOWES, a debutante.

Ellen is unwilling to wound Barclay but when scandalous gossip is circulated at the store, she determines to see him no more. However, Molly Rossiter, anxious for Ellen to marry a rich husband, invites Barclay to dinner. Without Ellen's knowledge, Molly borrows money to make the apartment more attractive and to buy the most expensive food. When the girl learns this she is furious. She and Molly go to the kitchen to prepare dinner while Myra and BERT ARMSTEAD, Myra's fiance, entertain Barclay.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

THE Rossiter ice-box was stuffed almost to the bursting point. Certainly Molly had stinted on nothing. There was pate, there was lobster, there were two plump, yellow ducks—and duck at $1.75 a pound. There were artichokes and avacados. There were all the things that should never have been included in a simple home dinner. But Ellen squared her jaw and flew about the heated kitchen, growing hotter and crosser each minute.

Perched at the kitchen table daintily shelling peas, Molly looked cool and comfortable and maddeningly satisfied with herself. From time to time she would hum a little tune. Then, glimpsing her daughter's black face, she would halt and virtuously continue shelling the peas. Molly was convinced everything would work out for the best.

Except for decorative purposes the colored maid was entirely useless. She did set the table with a great flourish. She considered that with serving and washing the dishes she would have more than earned her $5 and said so. When Ellen, ignoring this disinclination toward real labor, suggested that she baste the ducks, the maid looked aggrieved and "allowed" she did only plain cooking.

"This is plain enough," said Ellen in exasperation. "You'll simply have to do it while my mother and I dress. Just open the oven every 10 minutes and ladle the drippings up with a spoon."

"All right, Miss, I'll do it. But you can't blame me if them ducks don't taste jest right."

"We won't," snapped Ellen.

She grew cooler and more comfortable in the bedroom as she flung aside her business dress, went into the bathroom and cautiously bathed with due consideration for the fact that splashing water was audible in the living room. She returned to the bedroom and slipped into a clean, fresh, blue linen frock. She brushed her curling hair, powdered her flushed face and found the string of amber beads that went so well with her skin. She looked all right. The sleeveless dress, cheap as it was, was very kind to her slender youth.

"Ellen, honey," said her mother, entering, "will you fix my snaps, or are you still mad at me?"

Ellen's heart failed her. What was the use of anger, of threats, of reproaches? After a solemn talk, which took place as Ellen's fingers busied themselves with the snaps, Molly promised, as she had promised so often before, that there would be no more surprises. But she looked unusually sobered. By telling her of the gossip at the store Ellen had succeeded in frightening the harum-scarum, little Irish woman.

"They're just jealous," she declared. "If I were you I'd just tell that Mrs. Bondy that he was here for dinner tonight. That'd stop their mouths. I've half a notion to go down there and tell—"

"The best thing I can do," Ellen interrupted warningly, "is what I am doing—say nothing."

"Well—maybe you're right, but I'd like to give two or three of those girls a good shaking just the same!"

* * *

TOGETHER they went into the living room. Bert was engaged in a long and technical discussion of the comparative merits of the Yankees and the Giants. If Barclay were bored, his courteous, interested air concealed the fact. He stood up quickly as Ellen and Molly appeared.

"Well, dinner is almost ready—at last," Molly announced. "I hope you're not all starved. Where in the world do you suppose Mike is?"

"I'll go find him," offered Myra.

The room was breathlessly hot and every one was politely dissembling interest in the sharp, delicious odor of roasting duck.

"You haven't met the pride of the family," Ellen remarked smilingly to Barclay.

"Oh yes I have. I met him in the hall," Barclay affirmed.

Ellen did not know what made her think that he looked guilty in a small-boy way, but she did think that. Could Mike have said something to him? Myra had started for the door when Ellen suddenly determined to learn what had occurred in the hall. She spoke hurriedly and definitely.

"You go wash up, Myra. I'll gather Mike in."

She was out the door and running down the stairs. When she reached the street she saw that practically all the youngsters in the neighborhood—and they were many—had gathered before the apartment door, almost blocking it. A few stared with wistful longing at the sleek, black limousine from which the alertly rigid chauffeur barred them. But the majority, screaming and vociferous, were peering up the lamp-lighted street.

"Have any of you seen Mike Rossiter?" she inquired, wondering just what new game they were playing.

"Sure," half a dozen voices chorused shrilly. She picked out from the resultant confusion the information that Mike was giving Peter Rafferty a ride on his new bicycle.

Just then she saw Mike. He was strutting along proudly beside a shining wheel, calling out caution and advice to the tow-headed youngster who was pedaling. Ellen knew all at once why Barclay had looked so guilty. This was impossible!

"Mike Rossiter, come here this minute!" she called.

* * *

THE youngsters made way for him. Peter Rafferty slid from the seat and scuttled down the street like a small, active crab. Mike, unconscious of the calamity about to fall, carefully wheeled his new possession over the curb and up on the sidewalk. Ellen had never seen such glory as was on his transfigured face.

"Mr. Barclay gave it to me," he explained in a hushed voice, caressing with his grubby hand the shining mud-guards.

"But, darling, we can't let you keep it," Ellen said faintly.

The blow struck. Mike's face turned red; his blue eyes looked surprised, bewildered, confused, hurt and angry, in rapid succession. For a moment he gazed at her in appalled silence; then burst into loud and frantic wails. So overwhelming was his grief and rage that Ellen was afraid it would result in his usual upset stomach. She gathered in his shaking body, conscious that the entire juvenile population of the block was watching.

"I can't do anything," Mike sobbed. "I can't have anything. I promised all the other boys a ride. Mother'd let me have it. I'll be so good Ellen; I'll do everything you tell me."

"But Mike—"

"My bike, my bike!"

Ellen knew she was weak and that she should be firm. She knew that once she let Mike get the upper hand her discipline would be gone. But she could not stand out against this overwhelming grief. [illegible] relented.

When Ellen and Mike, the latter's face pale and tear-stained, got the bicycle up the stairs and into the living room, the girl saw that the news had preceded them. As they made their awkward entrance, she and Myra exchanged an expressive glance. Myra, too, was troubled by Barclay's munificence. But Molly, her small jaw set in stubborn lines, carefully avoided Ellen's eye. That was not surprising. Ellen had expected no help from that quarter.

There was an embarrassing silence.

Mike, childishly conscious that something was wrong, conscious that he had somehow failed his sister and by no means certain of his ultimate victory, deserted Ellen to rush to his mother. Molly stroked his hot little head buried in her lap and bent to whisper words of comfort.

Bert, twiddling with the radio dials, considered the whole affair unworthy of a man's attention. He could never understand what he termed those "Rossiter" moods of Myra and her sister.

The most uncomfortable person in the room was the real culprit. Steven had hoped Ellen would speak but when she did not he said anxiously: "Have I been thoughtless?"

Ellen, without comment, wheeled the bicycle into the crowded closet in the corner and shut the door with a rather sharp bang.

She did not know what to say. How could she tell Barclay that it was one thing to present a toy to the child of a millionaire and quite another to present that same toy to the child whose parents could not afford to give it to him? How could she tell him of the fierce and necessary pride of the poor?

"You've been extremely thoughtful," Molly was saying, with a timid glance at Myra. "Not one man in a thousand would know exactly what a boy of 10 wanted. Mike's been dying, simply dying, for a bicycle."

Mike shyly raised his head.

"I'm to keep it then?" he demanded eagerly. "Ellen said so if I'd be good."

At that moment the maid made a blessed interruption, an interruption which Ellen felt to be almost worth the $5 she was to receive. She clumped into the room to announce dinner was ready.

Plane-Like Sled

NEW YORK—Although the present winter hasn't been any too good for sled-riding, a manufacturer has placed on the market a plane-cled. The sled is built on a central runner and has one wing. At each end of the wing is a small runner similar to pontoons on the wings of a seaplane. The rider sits or lies on a flat board fixed on top of the main runner. Steering is done by tilting on to the small runners on either side of the wing.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

PAINFUL WEAK CONDITION

"I was weak and could not do my work," writes Mrs. C. O. Sutton, of Elizabeth, Ind.

"I had pains in my back and side. It seemed like when I would get up, I would drag around to do my work, and had bad headache. My mother told me to try Cardui. She had taken it herself, and had found it a good medicine. I took several bottles of Cardui and it helped me very much."

Cardui is a purely vegetable, "building-up" medicine. Thousands of women have reported that it helped them to overcome certain womanly troubles due to weakness.

YES — I ONCE FOUGHT A DUEL, AND WITH THIS VERY PISTOL! — THE COUNT ANDRE DE MERSAULT VERY FOOLISHLY CHALLENGED ME TO A DUEL, NOT KNOWING THAT I WAS THE BEST PISTOL SHOT ON THE CONTINENT! — WE MET ON A COLD, GREY DAWN IN THE WOODS OF SAUREAUX — HE FIRED FIRST — THE BALL STRIKING A CARRIAGE WHEEL — THEN I FIRED, FLICKING THE TIP OFF HIS WAXED MOUSTACHE!
YOU SOUND LIKE TH' MIDDLE OF AN OLD NOVEL! I'D GO FOR THAT BILL IF I DIDN'T HAVE TH' NUMBER ON YOUR LINE — THAT RUSTY OLD FLINTLOCK HASN'T BEEN FIRED SINCE GUYS WORE LACE CUFFS!

MRS. REDFIELD? I'M DOCTOR KEMP... I SENT YOU WORD THAT I WAS CALLING WITH A PATIENT OF MINE, WHO INSISTS ON SEEING YOU —
OH YES, DR. KEMP... WON'T YOU COME INTO THE NEXT ROOM AND HAVE CHAIRS?
YOU PROBABLY ARE PUZZLED AS TO WHY I BRING THIS MAN TO SEE YOU.... WELL, SO AM I.... I'LL LET HIM EXPLAIN THE OBJECT OF OUR VISIT.... IT'S HIS AFFAIR, NOT MINE!!
YES.... I CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHAT MR. MELLINGER, HERE, WOULD WANT TO SEE ME ABOUT.
BUT WHAT WOULD YOU SAY, MRS. REDFIELD, IF I TOLD YOU MY REAL NAME WAS BORSON... ABE BORSON?
ABE BORSON!! YOU'RE NOT THAT MAN??
WHY IS MRS. REDFIELD SO STARTLED AT THE NAME OF ABE BORSON?

THERE'S A SECRET DOOR HERE SOMEWHERE. I REMEMBER SEEING MY GRANDFATHER COME OUT OF IT ONCE. AH—HERE'S A BUTTON.
LOOK! IT OPENS!
GET YER GUN READY, SPORT. HERE WE GOES.
BUT—BUT I THOUGHT YOU SAID THERE WAS NO DANGER.
AW, HE'S ONLY KIDDIN'. IT'S AWRIGHT.
AND, PRETTY SOON RIP IS PEEPING CAUTIOUSLY INTO THE DUNGEON.
THEY CLIMB DOWN A RUSTY, OLD LADDER.
THA'S FINE. NOT A SOUL IN SIGHT.

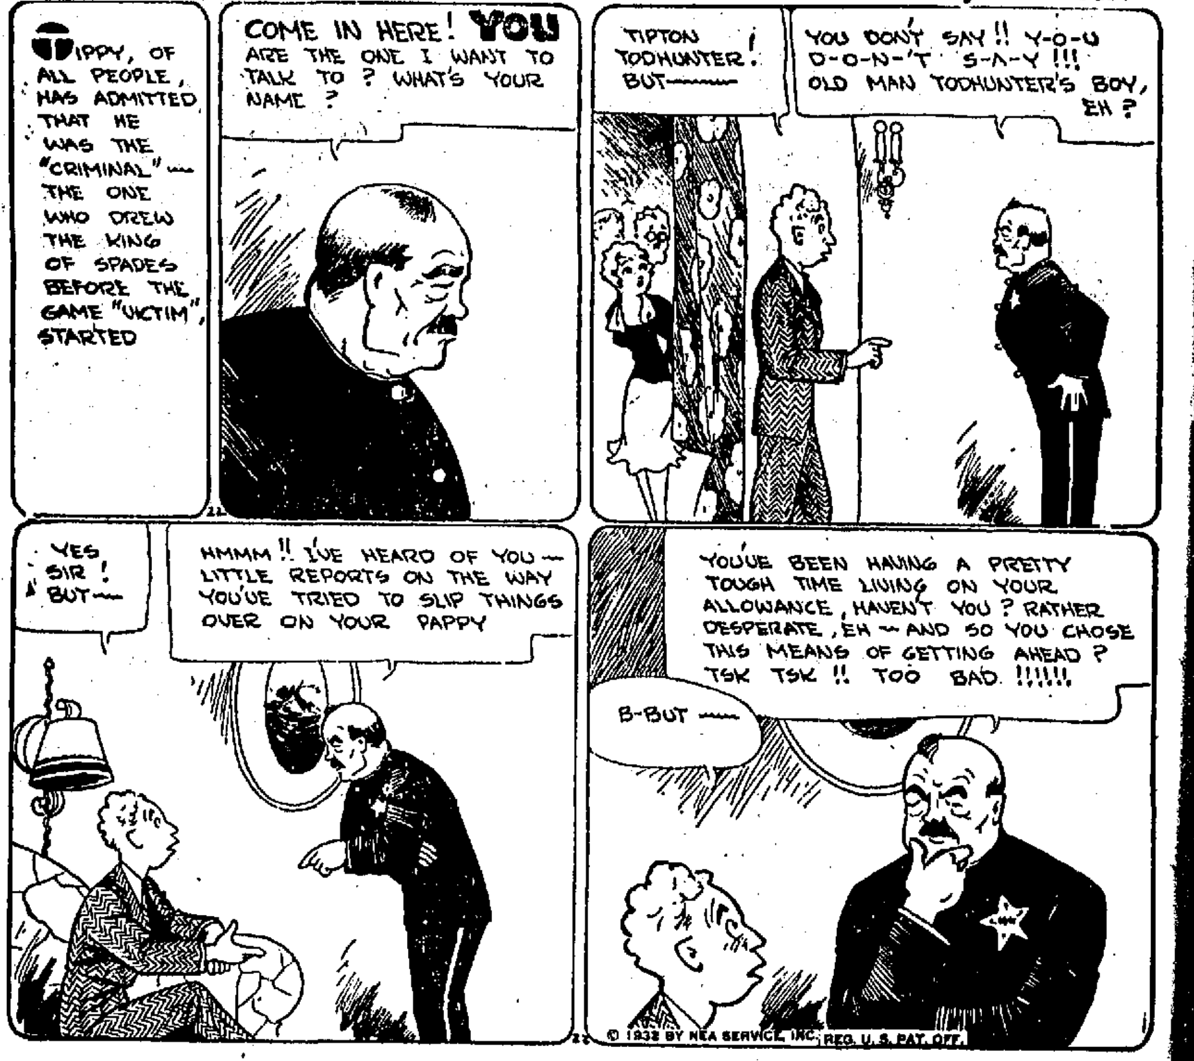
BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

By MARTIN



TIPPY, OF ALL PEOPLE, HAS ADMITTED THAT HE WAS THE "CRIMINAL" — THE ONE WHO DREW THE KING OF SPADES BEFORE THE GAME "VICTIM" STARTED
COME IN HERE! YOU ARE THE ONE I WANT TO TALK TO? WHAT'S YOUR NAME?
TIPTON TOOHUNTER! BUT—
YOU DON'T SAY!! Y-O-U D-O-N-'T S-A-Y!!! OLD MAN TOOHUNTER'S BOY, EH?
YES SIR! BUT—
HMMM!! I'VE HEARD OF YOU — LITTLE REPORTS ON THE WAY YOU'VE TRIED TO SLIP THINGS OVER ON YOUR PAPPY
YOU'VE BEEN HAVING A PRETTY TOUGH TIME LIVING ON YOUR ALLOWANCE, HAVEN'T YOU? RATHER DESPERATE, EH — AND SO YOU CHOSE THIS MEANS OF GETTING AHEAD? TSK TSK!! TOO BAD!!!!!!
